a supplement to a guide to manuscripts relating to the american indian in the library of the aps published by the society in 1966 in only a dozen years since the pub of the guide substantial additions to the collection reached the point where a revision or supplement to the guide was desirable and even necessary for this purpose the library was fortunate to obtain the services of daythal kendall then a graduate student in the university of pennsylvania whose own research on the language of the takelma indians eminently qualified him for the undertaking as he states in his introduction dr kendall has not only followed the format of the predecessor vol but has introduced into his own text cross references to the guide

during the mid to late seventeenth century women in irish houses from elite backgrounds started to collect recipes which they recorded in domestic manuscripts while these manuscripts were made elsewhere at an earlier date they were an almost entirely new arrival to ireland in this period and their sudden proliferation said much about changes taking place in society at large this book is a detailed study of such manuscripts from the perspective of historical archaeology which will argue that they are artifacts which clearly demonstrate that a profound series of changes was taking place the written word penetrated people s daily lives and homes to a degree that it had not in previous periods and it had a profound influence on how they related to their world objects and each other while this book will address how we can use them as sources for the study of food history and material culture it is ultimately concerned with the meanings of manuscript recipe books and specifically what they say about the individuals and society that made them the proliferation of these manuscripts signaled a profound change not just in cuisine but also in the way people thought about and related to food as a form of material culture ultimately this book will argue that these manuscripts are not simply excellent records which can tell us about material culture within the early modern house but that they are a profoundly important type of artifact in their own right undertaking research that situates textual objects such as recipe books at the very core of historical archaeology is critical to understanding some of the most significant changes that took place in the early modern world dunhuang manuscript culture explores the world of chinese manuscripts from ninth tenth century dunhuang an oasis city along the network of pre modern routes known today collectively as the silk roads the manuscripts have been discovered in 1900 in a sealed off side chamber of a buddhist cave temple where they had lain undisturbed for for almost nine hundred years the discovery comprised tens of thousands of texts written in over twenty different languages and scripts including chinese tibetan old uighur khotanese sogdian and sanskrit this study centres around four groups of manuscripts from the mid ninth to the late tenth centuries a period when the region was an independent kingdom ruled by local families the central argument is that the manuscripts attest to the unique cultural diversity of the region during this period exhibiting alongside obvious chinese elements the heavy influence of central asian cultures as a result it was much less chinese than commonly portrayed in modern scholarship the book makes a contribution to the study of cultural and linguistic interaction along the silk roads
