the hard boiled style of detective fiction emerged in america in the years after the first world war in the late 1940s following the depression the new deal and the second world war a new generation of young writers revisited the conventions governing the fictional private eye and began to move him the tough detective was still always male and his world in new directions this book examines the work of the four most important writers of this second generation of hard boiled fiction it offers the first substantial literary analysis of the max thursday novels of wade miller and the carney wilde novels of bart spicer and it develops new perspectives on the well known mike hammer novels of mickey spillane and the lew archer novels of ross macdonald a particular focus is upon the theme of the detective's status as a loner who succeeds in discovering truth and achieving justice because he works outside organized social structures the man who was thursday a nightmare is a novel by g k chesterton first published in 1908 the book has been referred to as a metaphysical thriller although it deals with anarchists the novel is not an exploration or rebuttal of anarchist thought chesterton's ad hoc construction of philosophical anarchism is distinguished from ordinary anarchism and is referred to several times not so much as a rebellion against government but as a rebellion against god this study looks at the complex relationship between postmodernism and the fantastic in contemporary british fiction and shows that a new type of the fantastic arises in postmodernism arguing against interpretations that view postmodernism as inherently fantastic it seeks to define the postmodern fantastic as a narrative mode that is influenced by certain traits both of the traditional fantastic and of literary postmodernism but does not simply conflate both in the first theoretical part a number of theories of the fantastic and of postmodernism are used to set the fantastic apart from other non mimetic forms of literature and to create a model of the postmodern fantastic that postulates the totalisation of the fantastic in postmodernism in the second part of this study this model is applied to a number of contemporary british texts which are particularly susceptible to this form of the fantastic due to several characteristics such as their muted kind of postmodernism and their frequent construction of parallel worlds the analysis of these texts focuses on four thematic fields of the postmodern fantastic the figure of the other as defined by bernhard waldenfels time and history text and textuality and the development of the todorovian pure fantastic finally the question of the death of the fantastic in postmodernism is examined
